Message from Sean:

Recently, I was enormously blessed to be back by the Red Sea, my spiritual homeland where we brought another 22 delegates on a relaxing winter's break. Of the 22 who travelled out with us, I was privileged to lead 9 of our group on a directed spiritual retreat, "Manifesting Our Spiritual Abundance," based on the teachings of the Essenes. I found it an amazing experience retracing my steps in that historic landscape where the energies are so pure. My fellow Sister Essene, Patricia Kerins, reminded me about my spiritual power and be aware how powerful one is when working with the Master Jesus. This was another one of those 'God incidents' when even Sean needed a gentle reminder from the Master of how He does use one even when we feel at our very lowest.

Prior to going to Taba on 28th January'08, you could say that I was experiencing several challenging moments alone with God when I was sensing another brief 'Dark Night of the Soul Experience' in my faith journey, caused by the uncovering of a fellow therapist, someone I loved and respected who was the instigator of a division in our spiritual family. Naturally, this caused me great anxiety and left me feeling a deep sadness for the person who could behave in such a manipulative and uncaring manner towards a friend. Several weeks after that incident of trying to flood the situation with Love, I begged the master Jesus to show me what 'His plans were for my life now that I was fast approaching 60,' as I was feeling alone and vulnerable and wanting to give up the work in hand! Prayers were heard and out of the ordinary came a sign in the form of a piece of paper that I found in front of the wood burning stove in the lounge. Minutes before there was nothing there as I had just cleaned the ash from the fire and sensed that I was to go into the office at around 2am and answer an email ASAP. On my return, there was Clemmie, our 9-month-old puppy sat in front of the fire and right next to her was this small piece of paper with writing on it. The words said, 'Support my loved ones in their spiritual journey,' To this day, I still don't know whose writing it was, nor do I need to know! In my heart I knew that it was another Angelic Encounter come with a specific message to guide my heart to remain focussed and not dwell on negative events. Yes, it is so easy to cave in when we are threatened by circumstances or events that overtake us when we are at our lowest.

As I write this I sense deep within my heart that when we come before the Master Jesus with our troubles that He actually does hear us and when we are receptive and listening, then and only then, does He send us the help to steer us through our crisis. I am not surprised anymore by the lengths other therapists will go too in their quest for creating havoc. Yes, the times when I have wanted to seek sweet revenge and have the last laugh. Instead, we are called not to engage in another's drama but step back and remind ourselves that as a child of God, our first duty is to honour that promise and take the appropriate action based on Love. We are called to speak out our truth as well as lead by example. This does not imply that we have to become 'pushovers,' but know that we are in service to a Higher Power who knows our needs and who delivers on the dotted line.

The word Light Worker is used to describe who we are but in truth that word is now been replaced by another more powerful word, LIGHT BRINGER. Our duty is to bring the Love and Light of Source in our hearts to all who are searching for truth. With that, I believe, comes specific responsibilities, like taking back our POWER from those who abuse it, or who may seek to control it. We cannot be Light Bringers if doubt that power and live in a negative mindset, living in crisis or afraid of facing our shadows. Now can we? I am convinced more than ever before, that the time has come when we should be using our Divine Power (The Power and Essence of the Master Jesus) and stands up and be counted as members of a spiritual army who have a vital role to play in preparation for the Advent of 2012. Instead of wasting time and valuable energy arguing among ourselves about trivia, we should be united as members of 'One Spiritual Force' and deliver what we agreed to do as part of our Sacred Contract.

Today, many light workers waste time, energy and limited finances chasing the winds. They are afraid to speak their truth and in literally hand their power over to those who will lead them astray. Then there are those who know exactly what they should do and cannot for fear of been singled out for criticism by their peers? Now, I ask myself with an NLP hat on, what is that all about? I have been criticised by the Christian Community for daring to suggest that Jesus was called Sananda and that He was married to Magdalene and that they had children. So much so, our local Methodist Church has asked me not to run our retreat days in the village chapel because, in their opinion, I don't appear to be a practising Christian, nor do I represent the ethos of Christianity. Again, in the camps of the enlightened Ones of our time, I also stand accused of been apparently 'too religious.' They say that by referring to the name Jesus, I am condoning Christian beliefs or, worst still, trying to convert others to my Christianity. Yes, I believe in Jesus the Teacher. Jesus was not a Christian! He was a Man of God who came to show ordinary men and women how they too could access the Divine through ordinary means, yet do the extraordinary through simplicity and truth just like Jesus, the Barefoot Galilean. In my honest opinion, there has never been a man created by Source who can match His credentials. If that is how others perceive religion, then I think that they have 'hang ups with their own religious upbringing' that really needs sorting.

So, as the late great David Watson said before his death, 'There is a cost to true Discipleship in service with the Master Jesus.' Yes, we will be singled out for unfair criticism but, hey, who cares? What matters is that we are grounded, protected and secure in the knowledge that as Brothers and Sisters in service with Jesus, then we have no fear whatsoever.

Recently, an article that spoke volumes to my soul blew me away and I sensed in my heart that I should share it with yours. The theme was, "Building Strong Characters" and the reflection was based on, "THE INTEGRITY OF THE UPRIGHT GUIDES THEM." The article went on to say that, Building strong character requires having integrity. The word integrity simply means 'to integrate, to make whole.' It requires being consistent in your values, thoughts, and actions. Margaret Mead stated, 'What people say, what people do, and what people say they do, are entirely different things.' Amazingly, there are some who actually promote this inconsistency. A popular fashion designer recently said: 'The crux of a person's identity ...resides in the trappings, not in the person himself....one needn't be well read, so long as one surrounds himself with books...In short...one can seem to be what one wants to be.' The trouble is, while you may make an impression with 'trappings,' the real you always come through! Impressions are like shadows; they disappear when a strong enough light is shone on them. Integrity is the genuine article-the more you shine the light on it, the more of its details you can see. Integrity shows that you truly are who you appear to be.

People of integrity always stand out. Author Pat Williams tells of Gandhi's trip to England to speak before Parliament. The British Government had opposed India's Independence and as a result Gandhi had often been threatened, arrested and jailed. Gandhi spoke eloquently and passionately for two hours, after which the packed hall gave him a standing ovation. Afterward, a reporter asked Gandhi's assistant how the statesman had been able to deliver such a speech without notes. 'You don't understand Gandhi,' he responded. 'What he thinks is what he feels. What he feels is what he says. What he says is what he does. What Gandhi feels, thinks, says and does, is all the same. So he doesn't need notes.' Now, that's integrity!

So many times we challenged, are we not, to throw out the baby with the bathwater? It is so easy to carry on with our plans when everything is tickety boo all is going to well for us. But, when we hit opposition, or criticism in our work as Light Bringers, it can most definitely unnerve us and leave us feeling emotionally and spiritually fractured to the point of 'giving up the dream' that God has for us.

There have been many times in my faith journey, especially in the past 4 years, when I have been severely challenged by Therapists to defend what I do and why I do it that particular way. The answer from the Master to my heart has always been the same, 'You don't have to defend my work in you.' As Jesus said so many times to His followers, 'If they have ears to hear, then they will hear.' Today, many who hear the Master's voice speaking to their heart, choose not to listen and prefer to go it alone. And that is OK too. But, when the 'guilt feelings' set in, they come a running over the hills and fells for a 'spiritual band aid.' Sadly, I don't engage or waste energy anymore trying to be Shirley Valentine. We are each responsible for our own faith journey and we have a duty of care to our soul/ Higher Self' to take our Power back and speak our truth despite the fear of been attacked. The way I now see it is that regardless of what we say, do or behave in the name of Divine Love, we will be individually singled out for unfair criticism by those who prefer to have their egos massaged instead of challenged. The only route to true and lasting spiritual advancement is when our 'ego is publicly humiliated.' Then and only then, can we really move forward like Gandhi and be what we already agreed to be, a Light Bringer of Peace in service to Source. As I know from my own personal journey of walking in service with Jesus, the road has not been easy but it has also been blessed by many graces too. I take heart as when I reflect on the Good Friday story and see my Master Jesus fall three times, each time He got up and up and up again! This historical event still empowers me to fight the good fight and win.

If we are to embrace integrity, then we have to learn from been humble and instead of always wanting to be first, we should remember to stand back and let others go before us as the Master did. Yes, we are not servants but co creators of Source in service with Sananda Jesus. So our openness and willingness to be Light Bringers of Integrity is at the heart of the Gospel story about selfless love.

Many times I have been asked about my brand of spirituality. Now, I call it, Bradleyan Spirituality' and it is alive, vibrant and encompasses a rich tradition of the ancient with a modern understanding of God, the One Who IS.....please feel free to read what Bradleyan Spirituality is and hopefully you will find something of interest for your own spiritual development. www.sean-bradley.com/aboutsean.htm I believe that as we are all unique as children of Source, we should have our own brand of what makes us tick. If the supermarkets can flog their own brand then why can't we providing it leads back to Source. As Jesus said, 'In my Father's house, there are many mansions.'

When you read the Story of how the Master greeted Mary Magdalene on Easter Morning, remember that He also invites us to 'Walk with Him - Enjoy being with Him – Trust Him and when the going gets tough as it often does, He will never forsake us.'

May I take this opportunity by wishing you and all your loved ones a Blessed and Peaceful Easter Holiday?

A wise old monk once said to me when I was a mere novice monk, 'Brother, it is not the habit that makes the monk, it is the monk who makes the habit.' Or, 'You will know my disciples not by their fancy suits, but by their fruits.'

Sean say's, 'Religion is for those of us who live in fear of Hell.
Spirituality is for those of us who have come through Hell.'
